

Language learning among friends

Learning a foreign language in a fascinating city should be fun. But if you vanish in a big group of people, even the best intentions are likely to vanish, too. At WWT, you get the attention you need to succeed!

TEXT: SONJA IRANI | PHOTOS: WWT

Vienna is always worth a trip. As a cultural and political hub of Europe it attracts art lovers as well as managers or government representatives who add this important city to their CVs. Learning German here seems like the perfect pastime. Finding the right language school among the flood of offerings, however, can be a daunting process that most people, especially managers, often don't have the time or the nerves for. This is where WWT comes in. The language school, located in the very heart of Vienna, offers tailor-made courses in German and a variety of other languages. WWT is very different from other schools because here the client truly is king.

"We don't give you a number – we know you by name!" explains Mag. Evelin Striegler, head teacher at WWT. "Your personal needs and individual, flexible programmes are a matter of heart to us. Every course is tailor-made according to your wishes and therefore unique. You, the client, decide what you would like to be taught, the time and the venue of your course. In our school, the client is the centre of attention. Why do you fly first-class or business? For the plus in service, quality and individuality – this is precisely what you'll find at WWT!"

Language learners who opt for a school like WWT and have a personal connection to their teacher will get more opportunities to practise their language skills and are therefore likely to improve faster than others. Striegler remembers many success stories. "A special moment was when a general manager from Great Britain was able to hold his inaugural speech in German after just four weeks of an intense German language course," says Striegler. "And he did this in front of the whole Austrian work force, who thanked him with tremendous applause – what a great start in his new working environment!"

www.worldwideteaching.at

Mag. Evelin Striegler, owner WWT